

ISPs Testify on Cybersecurity

Washington, DC

Wednesday, March 7, 2012

Internet Service Providers (ISP) testified about about securing their communications networks from cyber threats. Rep. Greg Walden (R-OR) chaired the hearing of the House Energy Subcmte. on Communications and Technology.

Earlier in the month, Chairman Walden appointed a bi-partisan working group, made up of three Democrats and three Republicans, to study "legal impediments" to securing private computer networks against cyberattacks.

Reps. Lee Terry (R-NE) and Anna Eshoo (D-CA) head the working group. Other members include: Doris Matsui (D-CA), Bob Latta (R-OH), Mike Doyle (D-PA) and Adam Kinzinger (R-IL).

Click here for full article.